

'U.S. Not In Recession'

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford told a sun-drenched Rose Garden news conference Wednesday he hopes for "some meaningful reduction in the rate of inflation" by early next year and does not believe the country is suffering from a recession.

In the first outdoor question-and-answer session with reporters since the administration of Lyndon B. Johnson, Ford also declared that:

—Despite his wife's recent cancer surgery, "I have seen nothing to change" his inclination to run for election in 1976.

—"If there is a reason" for him to meet with Soviet leader Leonid I. Brezhnev before a planned 1975 Washington summit, "I will certainly consider it." White House officials say a November meeting somewhere in the Pacific is under consideration.

—He continues to oppose forced busing to achieve racial balance in schools, but thinks it of "maximum importance that the citizens of Boston respect the law" and that it will not be necessary to send federal troops there to deal with racial disturbances.

—He still hopes to find a constitutional way to provide federal aid to private and parochial schools although the courts have frowned upon the tax credit idea he long had favored.

—He will meet Mexican President Luis Echeverria on the border between Arizona and that country on Oct. 21.

—A $50,000 gift by Vice President Designate Nelson A. Rockefeller to Henry A. Kissinger before he joined the government was free of impropriety, and the secretary of state "deserves whatever good and appropriate things I can say about him."

Responding to the first question of the afternoon, Ford said, "I do not think the United States is in a recession. We do have economic problems, but it is a very mixed situation."

If Congress and the people respond to the economic program he unveiled Tuesday, Ford said, he is convinced "We can have, hopefully early in 1975, some meaningful reduction in the rate of inflation."

In the past, Ford has talked about conquering rising prices by mid-1976 and Alan Greenspan, chairman of his Council of Economic Advisers, has said it might take until 1977.

Nevertheless Ford said if Congress grants his request for a one-year, 5 per cent surcharge on income taxes for corporations and middle and upper income Americans, such measures would not have to be extended beyond 1975.

Asked to explain why he rejected proposals for a higher gasoline tax or fuel rationing, the President said he decided a surtax would be more equitable.

"I don't think we have to put a tax on gasoline users to achieve our objective," he said. "And if we can do it (conserve energy) by voluntary action, I think it is far preferable and more in the tradition of the American system."

Ford did express dissatisfaction with the pace of Project Independence but sought to place part of the blame on the Democratic-controlled Congress, saying:

"There have been a number of legislative proposals before the Congress that would increase domestic supplies. Unfortunately in too many cases the Congress has not responded, so the Congress has to share some of the blame with the executive branch."

Only two questions were asked that related to resigned President Richard Nixon.

To one, Ford declined to discuss further the unconditional pardon he granted his predecessor, saying, "I think it is most appropriate that I defer any comment on that subject" until testimony he is scheduled to give to a House judiciary subcommittee Oct. 17.

To another, Ford defended his recommendation, sharply assailed in Congress, that Nixon be provided with $850,000 for a transition period.

"The amount that was submitted on this occasion," said Ford, "was roughly comparable to the amounts that have been made available to other presidents who were leaving office."

The economy dominated the session, with Ford arguing that his proposed surtax would affect only 28 per cent of all taxpayers and would produce income that would stimulate the slumping housing industry and assist those hardest hit by inflation.

In his Tuesday address on the economy, Ford endorsed a tax revision bill pending before the House Ways and Means Committee, but acknowledged today he does not necessarily embrace all its features.

"But I do believe that on balance, it is important for me to endorse that bill," he said.

In an apparent difference of opinion with Treasury Secretary William E. Simon, Ford said flatly that the controversial oil depletion allowance should be phased out.

Seven Hostages Released

SANTO DOMINGO, Dominican Republic (AP) — A 13-day siege at the Venezuelan consulate ended Wednesday night when seven leftist guerrillas freed American diplomat Barbara Hutchison and six other hostages and flew to Panama aboard a special Dominican jetliner.

The gunmen were met in Panama by Lt. Col. Manuel Antonio Noriega, chief intelligence officer of the Panamanian National Guard.

The hostages — four men and three women — were engulfed by happy friends and relatives as they emerged from the Venezuelan consulate where they had been held in a second-floor room since Sept. 27.

"Suddenly I became a tremendous bargain," Miss Hutchison said at a news conference a few hours after being released. "I went from a million to nothing."

She referred to the decision of the kidnappers to give up their demands for $1 million and the release of 37 political prisoners.

Instead, the guerrilla group led by Radhames Mendez Vargas settled for President Joaquin Balaguer's offer of safe conduct out of the country.

Panamanian Ambassador Alejandro Cuello Arosemena accompanied them on the special Dominican Airlines 727 flight which took off about 8:15 p.m.

Miss Hutchison said the most difficult thing had been "the waiting and then the various crises as they occur. . . . We were, of course, very short on water, and it's amazing how much water matters, even more than food."

The 47-year-old director of the U. S. Information Service here said she was "not mistreated at all, although there were many tense moments." She spoke after showering and dining at the home of U.S. Ambassador Robert Hurwicz.

Police Positive Rep. Mills Involved In Night Incident

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. Park Police said Wednesday they had no doubt that Rep. Wilbur D. Mills, his face scratched and bleeding and breath smelling of alcohol, was one of the people involved in a bizarre late-night incident at the foot of the Jefferson Memorial.

"We can assume it was Rep. Mills," Franklin A. Arthur, assistant chief of the park police, told a news conference.

Mills, an Arkansas Democrat and chairman of the tax-writing Ways and Means Committee, could not be reached for comment about the Monday morning episode. His administrative assistant, Oscar (Gene) Goss, said early Wednesday that "Mr. Mills told me he was not in the car." Later, however, Goss said "I cannot refute what the Park Police say."

Arthur said one of the persons involved was a 38-year-old woman who jumped into the tidal basin at the foot of the memorial and was rescued by police.

The incident occurred at 2 a.m., when police stopped a late model Lincoln Continental described as traveling at "an unreasonable speed with its lights off."

Five people spilled out of the car.

Arthur told the news conference one of them identified himself as Mills. "I think the officers would recognize Congressman Mills," Arthur said.

The assistant chief said he wasn't certain what sort of identification the man offered police. Arthur said the police report described Mills as "intoxicated." He said the officers based that on the smell of his breath.

Mills has not been seen in public since then.

Goss said, "I've only talked to Congressman Mills by phone, the last time this morning. I can only go by what he tells me."

Mills was not at his office or at a Ways and Means Committee hearing at which Treasury Secretary William Simon testified on President Ford's tax proposals.

Police said that when the car stopped, Annabella Battistella of suburban Arlington, Va., jumped out, crying and shouting something, partly in English, partly in Spanish. She lay on the ground, but as police began questioning the other occupants, she got up ran to a bridge and jumped into the tidal basin, which ranges in depth from 3 to 6 feet.

Arthur said the woman was "obviously intoxicated."

She gave her address as 1600 South Eads St., Arlington, the site of the large apartment complex where Mills and his wife also reside.

Mills, who has two children, is facing an unexpectedly stiff challenge this year in his campaign for re-election to a 19th term in the House.

Arthur said Mills had been seated in the front seat of the car with Miss Battistella and Albert G. Gapacini, 39, of Arlington, who was driving.

Arthur said there was evidence there had been an altercation in the car, which bore Arkansas license plates DOT-003 and was registered in Mills' name. The congressman had facial scratches and a bloody nose, the official said.

Along with the 65-year-old congressman, the car's occupants were identified as Lilliane Kassar, 38, of Washington, and Gloria Sanchez of Arlington.

The Washington Star-News quoted witnesses to the incident as saying that after Miss Battistella jumped into the tidal basin a police officer dove in after her and pulled her to shore by her hair. Mouth-to-mouth resuscitation was used to revive her.

She was taken to St. Elizabeth's Hospital and later released.

Arthur said the incident is considered closed.

No charges were filed.

Larry Krebs, a WMAL-TV newsman who filmed the scene, said he saw a man who was Mills "unless he's got a dead duplicate."

Krebs said that as the man approached within camera range a park policeman took him by the arm and said, "Congressman, come on, you don't need this kind of publicity."

Author Blasts Myth Of Captain America

By LIANE GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer

Those who read Dr. Robert Jewett's book, "The Captain America Complex," either love him or despise him. There's no middle ground.

"I've received my share of hate mail," he admits smugly. One critic inferred that he "must be French because the French hate the United States."

Jewett bases his book on America's zealous tradition of "making the world safe for democracy."

"Americans have always believed that they were the chosen people," he writes, "innocent, righteous, free of any taint or self-seeking, above the uses of historical precedent and dowered by heaven with the responsibility for creating a millennium."

'On Side Of Just'

"America has assumed that it is always on the side of the just. Good guys always win."

"After all," he pointed out, "if God's for it, who's going to be against it?"

The author was born in Lawrence, Mass., and came with his family to Nebraska in the 1930s. He is the son of the Rev. and Mrs. Walter Jewett.

Dr. Jewett is a graduate of Nebraska Wesleyan University and will be lecturing Thursday in classes at NWU.

The Captain America complex is derived from two traditions with deep roots in American history. Jewett explained in an interview Wednesday. On one side is "zealous nationalism" as seen in the religious fervor of the Puritans and crusading figures such as John Brown.

On the other side is "prophetic realism," ideally characterized by "Honest" Abe Lincoln.

"Zealous nationalists" believe there are certain bad people in the world and violence is redemption; evil doers must be wiped out, he said.

"Prophetic realists" believe there's a little evil in everyone, everybody is equal before the law and violence is never redemption, he said.

Zealousness Tilt

Trouble arises, because our traditions lean heavily toward zealousness, which Jewett fears may destroy American society and eventually the world.

"Zealousness eats everything," he said. "The way past this is to turn to the Constitution and away from this crusade."

"You can see it in cowboy movies," he continued. "Indians are always pictured as bad guys. The audience is wired up to cheer when the Indians bite the dust. The cavalry is God's agent of destruction."

"This theory gives moral justification for genocide."

Jewett said he sees traces of what he calls "cool" zealousness in American war songs, such as the "Battle Hymn of the Republic."

"Let us die to make men holy as He died to make men free . . ." the verse reads. "His truth is marching on."

'Dying Selflessly'

"The picture we get here is that we are dying selflessly to make men free," he said. "The Civil War, the Spanish-American War, the Vietnam War — they're all noble wars. We weren't there to seek our own ends."

JEWETT . . . hate mail.

Jewett explained the "cool" motif as a means of eliminating personal responsibility. "The individual is not killing," he said. "He's selflessly dying. God is pulling the trigger."

The result of this reasoning, he said, "is a culture with a higher tolerance for violence as long as we don't do it. That's why Americans prefer to drop bombs from airplanes — it eliminates personal responsibility."

Jewett said he finds the same myths in comic books and television programs.

If anyone gets killed in the "Lone Ranger," it's always his own fault. . . . the bad guys fall in their own trap, a bullet ricochets. "Never pin anything on anybody. God did it."

"Cleaning Up World"

Then there's Chile. . . . "All the United States was doing was cleaning up the world," Jewett said, tongue-in-cheek.

"Like Kissinger said, we were just trying to keep opposition parties alive. It's too bad about Allende."

Jewett said he sees Nixon as an example of "artful" zeal — he's a man who could manipulate zealous myths for political advantage, he said.

"It's evident from reading the transcripts that Nixon didn't believe the myths himself, but he used them brilliantly to manipulate the public and his own men."

Commenting on Sen. Carl T. Curtis (R-Neb.) theory that some evil force was behind the Watergate bungling, Jewett said, "This is a clear case of the myth replacing reality."

"He (Curtis) just can't admit that Captain America was rotten"

Parachute Fails; Lincolnite Killed

A 44-year-old member of the Lincoln Sport Parachute Club died Wednesday evening when his main chute failed to open and he waited too long to pull his reserve chute.

Police said the man — whose identity was being withheld pending notification of relatives — and a fellow club member, Donald Dingman, 24, of 1207 N. 21st, jumped over Arrow Airport at 7,500 feet and pulled their chutes at 3,000 feet.

Dingman told police his companion's main parachute did not open properly and streamed out above him as he fell. Dingman said the man made no attempt to cut away from his main chute and did not activate his reserve chute until he was only 100 to 200 feet above the ground.

He landed in a paved parking lot at the Holiday Inn at 5250 Cornhusker.

The senior member of the parachute club, Shorty Janousek, said club rules require that parachutes be opened at a minimum of 2,500 feet to provide a safety margin.

Janousek said a reserve chute takes 150 to 200 feet to open fully.

Janousek said the victim had hit his head on a pipe before the jump, but appeared to be unhurt. He was offered an automatic device which would have opened his chute at 1,000 feet but chose not to use it.

The man was the father of seven children. He started parachuting last spring, and was making his 49th jump.

Disobedient Student Hits School Teacher At Everett

Principal Francis Arthur and a teacher at Everett Junior High School have decided to file no charges against a student who reportedly struck the teacher Monday after school.

Arthur confirmed the incident to The Star, but said he wished to protect the teacher, and wouldn't disclose her name.

The 23-year-old female teacher was reportedly struck by a male student.

Arthur said the student was "habitually truant and behind in his work."

Incident Described

The teacher told The Star Wednesday she had directed the boy to stay after school. When the boy began to leave her class, she told him, "Sit down." The boy's "arm flew up" and hit the teacher's face, and she said when she grabbed it to stop him, the momentum of the swing caused her to fall to one knee.

She suffered no injuries, other than a bruised knee, Arthur said. Supt. of Lincoln Schools John Prash said the incident wasn't reported to him.

"There was no malice" on the part of the student, the teacher emphasized. "It was just a loss of temper." She added: "No fault has been proven."

Arthur played down the incident, saying there was "really no harm done," and the teacher agreed, in a separate interview.

Arthur stressed that the student's action was "not done deliberately," but it spiked rumors of an assault on the teacher.

Would Make Problem

Arthur and the teacher urged that the information on the Monday incident be withheld, saying it will make a problem where none exists.

If the teacher involved in the Monday incident wishes to file charges against the student, the Lincoln Education Association (LEA) will assist her and post bond. LEA Executive Director Robert F. Peterson said Wednesday, when informed about the matter.

Even though the teacher is not an LEA member, Peterson said the association has a standing policy to help any teacher who requests it in such incidents.

Cuba To Release 4 Americans

Washington (AP) — Sens Jacob K. Javits, R-N.Y., and Claiborne Pell, D-R.I., announced Wednesday that Cuba soon will release four American prisoners as a good will gesture to the senators.

The two senators, recently returned from a visit to Havana where they conferred with Cuban Premier Fidel Castro said Cuban authorities will release David Bruce Nirenburg, Susan Lane Brown, Philip Fred Burris and Richard Peter Johnson.

Javits and Pell said Nirenburg and Brown were arrested Sept. 17, 1973, while aboard the yacht "Sahive" off the Cuban coast and were charged with the possession of drugs.

Nirenburg is from Upper Sagon, Pa., and the Brown woman is from South Royaltan, Vt. Both have three years remaining on their prison sentences.

Burris, a native of Oakland, Calif., and Johnson were arrested Nov. 14, 1970, after landing an airplane in Cuba with no Cuban visa or U.S. passport.

They were charged with taking drugs into Cuba, but the two senators said they claimed there were no drugs on board their plane and that they landed in Cuba because their plane was running out of fuel. Both have one year remaining on their sentences.

There are eight American political prisoners in Cuban jails, the officials said, and an unknown number who were arrested after hijacking planes to Cuba from the United States.

The two senators said word of the planned release was delivered to them Wednesday afternoon, by the Czechoslovakian ambassador to the United States on behalf of the acting Cuban foreign minister.

Pell said Ambassador Dusan Spacil told him he would contact his country's embassy in Havana so that the Cuban government can make the necessary "technical arrangement" for release of the prisoners.

"I am delighted at this tangible result of our trip," Pell said.

Javits said he was also gratified.

Job Proposal Runs Into Buzz Saw

Washington (UPI) — Labor Secretary Peter Brennan outlined President Ford's unemployment program to Congress Wednesday and ran into a buzz saw from Democrats who called it too little and too slow, Republicans who called it unrealistic and labor leaders who called it "far short of what's needed."

Brennan testified in a hastily called joint meeting of the House and Senate Labor Committees and explained that the proposals would go into effect only if unemployment reaches 6% for three consecutive months. Unemployment now stands at 5.8%.

It would provide increased unemployment insurance benefits in several stages, combined with creation of temporary public service jobs in a community improvement program similar in many respects to the Civilian Conservation Corps of the 1930's.

Rep. Dominick Daniels, D-N.J., said the 6% trigger means to "wait too long" to help the neediest, and Sen. Gaylord Nelson, D-Wis., said that Milwaukee, which has 7% unemployment, would not qualify for the extra benefits under the formula because the metropolitan labor market area has a rate below 6.5%.

William Kolberg, assistant labor secretary for manpower, argued that the trigger was designed to "focus on places where the problems are worst."

But Rep. Marvin Esch, R-Mich., called the proposal "artificial, contrived and inequitable," and said the trigger level should be lowered because of the three-months' delay.

Leonard Woodcock, president of the United Auto Workers, issued a statement saying any program tied to a 6% jobless rate "appears to be far short of what's needed to relieve suffering," and added that the return for business and the wealthy from a 5% tax surcharge would be greater.

Jerry Wurf, president of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Workers, complained that Ford is "telling us if unemployment goes up another 200,000 he'll provide a maximum of 70,000 jobs at poverty wages."

Under terms of Ford's job proposal, when unemployment has been at 6% for three consecutive months, $2.1 billion would be available for additional cash benefits to some 1.9 million workers previously ineligible, and another 830,000 whose benefits had expired.

Another $750 million would be provided when unemployment reaches 6.5%, and still another $1 billion if it reaches 7%.

There are currently 7.9 million people receiving unemployment payments, totaling $7.8 billion a year, according to White House figures.

Gas Firms, Environmentalist Support Proposal To Hike Price

Nebraska natural gas companies and an environmental group spokesman agree with President Ford's proposal to deregulate natural gas prices, thereby increasing them.

Spokesmen for Northern Natural Gas of Omaha and the Kansas-Nebraska Natural Gas Co. of Hastings both expressed their firms' desire for the higher market prices that would probably result. They said the higher prices would encourage natural gas exploration and drill development.

Ron Kurtzer, chairman of the Bluestream Sierra Club of southeast Nebraska, said Sierra Club members think gas consumption would go down if market prices begin to "reflect (the) true cost" of natural gas.

"Price incentives are a good way to conserve energy," Kurtzer said.

"Prices have been held artificially low," he said. When they more accurately reflect the fuel's value "certain wasteful users, such as industry, will reduce consumption."

Howard Sorenson, public information director for NNG, said his company is paying 42 cents for 1,000 cubic feet of natural gas, "when we can get it." The federal ceiling is 43 cents per 1,000 cubic feet.

NNG sells the gas for about 50 cents per 1,000 cubic feet.

Sorenson explained that the company pays an average of 26 cents per 1,000 cubic feet, because old contracts enable NNG to get some gas for less than that, while newer contracts carry much higher price tags.

The markup is to pay for company operation, gas transportation and pipelines, he said.

Larry Garberding, vice president of Kansas-Nebraska, said his company pays an average of 22 cents per 1,000 cubic feet, again with newer contracts reaching up to the 43-cent federal ceiling.

Garberding said the company has trouble getting natural gas because drilling companies in the South prefer to sell to natural gas suppliers within their states, where federal price regulations don't apply.

Garberding said such intrastate sales carry price tags of up to $1 and $1.50 per 1,000 cubic feet.

Both men said this year's prices are not much higher than last year's because the federal ceiling has kept them "artificially low."

Judge Refuses Call For U.S. Marshals

BOSTON (AP) — A federal judge refused to call in federal marshals Wednesday to quell disturbances resulting from Boston's school busing and instead ordered Mayor Kevin H. White to summon police from surrounding areas to do the job.

U.S. District Court Judge W. Arthur Garrity Jr. said White should ask the governor to call up the National Guard if calling in the extra police does not work.

The ruling followed another day of disturbances in the city, mainly in predominantly black Roxbury where, the mayor's office said, about 200 black youths roamed through a three-block area.

White had asked Garrity to call in at least 125 U.S. marshals.

Joan Kennedy Charged With Drunken Driving

FAIRFAX, Va. (AP) — Joan Kennedy, the wife of Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., was charged with driving while intoxicated Wednesday after her convertible was involved in a three-car accident, Fairfax County police said.

Mrs. Kennedy, who was later released on her own recognizance, was driving southbound on Route 123 at about 1:45 p.m. EDT when her auto struck another southbound vehicle that was stopped for a traffic light at an intersection, police said.

The area is a Washington, D.C., suburb near the Kennedy home in McLean, Va.

The impact knocked the second vehicle into the rear of a third vehicle, police said. There were no injuries, and police estimated the damage to all three vehicles at $1,400.

Curtis, Hruska On Losing Sides

Washington (AP) — Nebraska Sen. Carl T. Curtis was among the minority Wednesday when the Senate adopted an amendment to an appropriations bill calling for the suspension of military aid to Turkey.

The roll call vote was 62-16, with Nebraska's other Republican senator, Roman Hruska, not listed as voting.

Both Curtis and Hruska were on the losing side Tuesday night when the Senate passed a bill, 60-16, overhauling federal campaign finance laws.

Surtax May Be Needed Two Years, Ullman Says

WASHINGTON (AP) — An inflation-fighting income tax surcharge may have to be levied for at least two years instead of just the single year proposed by President Ford, the acting head of the House Ways and Means Committee said Wednesday.

"We're not going to come out of this economic crisis — and we'd better recognize it — in one year. It is going to take longer than that," Rep. Al Ullman, D-Ore., told reporters.

Ullman presided in the place of Chairman Wilbur D. Mills, D-Ark., as the panel opened consideration of the proposals advanced by Ford a day earlier.

The panel first heard Treasury Secretary William Simon present the administration's case for the new taxes. And Ullman agreed that the President has "given us a format and I think, because the country is in trouble, it is our responsibility to . . . get it passed this year."

Ullman said the nation will not be able to do the things "that have to be done unless we raise some revenue. At this point, it appears that there is no way of raising the required amount of revenue unless we get some kind of surcharge, putting the heaviest possible burden on the corporate economy . . . and also on the higher-bracket earners."

As for keeping the surcharge to one year, Ullman said: "I think that is not a possibility. I think it is being unrealistic. And if we have a surcharge, we certainly have to look at least two years and possibly longer."

Simon suggested that the committee handle the tax proposals through separate legislation instead of putting them aboard the general tax revision bill on which the panel has been working for several months.

Ullman disagreed. "I feel very strongly that the American people are going to insist upon tax reform if we are going to pass a surcharge. My feeling is that you are not going to get a surcharge unless you get the whole package. That's my position and I think that of the committee," Ullman told reporters.

Simon, however, said the Ford administration wants to "take a rifle approach to tax reform proposals, rather than the shotgun approach that is taken in broad tax reform. In limiting the number of proposals, we had hoped for very fast passage."

Ford called for a one-year, 5 per cent surcharge on all corporate earnings along with similar levy upon individual income above $7,500 and family income above $15,000.

Businesses would get a break, meanwhile, in the way of boosting the investment tax credit from 7 per cent to 10 per cent and allowing deductions for dividends paid on preferred stocks.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., issued a statement Wednesday urging Ford to withdraw the surtax proposal because it is unfair to the average American when weighed against "the excessive pro-business orientation of the President's program."

"To be blunt, the reason for the President's reliance on the surcharge instead of tax reform isn't hard to guess," said Kennedy.

At the House committee hearing, Rep. Herman T. Schneebeli, R-Pa., told Simon that congressional approval of the surcharge will depend on what the voters tell congressmen during the weeks before the Nov. 5 election.

Simon estimated that the surtax would apply to some 28 per cent of the $2.5 million tax returns which are filed, involving roughly 23 million persons.

The president's proposals will be considered by the Joint Congressional Economic Committee in hearings starting Friday.

Individualists Win Economics Nobels

Friedrich von Hayek

Gunnar Myrdal

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Two 75-year-old social economists of fundamentally differing viewpoints were named on Wednesday winners of the 1974 Nobel Prize for Economics.

Both are individualists. Gunnar Myrdal of Sweden is best known for his controversial studies of the American Negro and of Asian democracies, while Friedrich von Hayek of Austria is a well-known theorist of conservative economics.

The two will share the $124,000 prize money equally.

"One (Myrdal) will be surprised he had to share it, the other (Hayek) that he got it," said a prominent economist at the prize-awarding Royal Academy of Science — of which Myrdal is one of the 180 members.

The economist, who asked his name be withheld, said von Hayek is "a scholar who delves back into the centuries searching for ideas" while Myrdal "always comes up with original ideas of his own."

The academy cited the two "for their pioneering work in the theory of money and economic fluctuations and for their penetrating analysis of the interdependence of economic, social and institutional phenomena."

Myrdal's most important work, "An American Dilemma: the Negro Problem and Modern Democracy" published 30 years ago, had a deep and lasting impact on the American scene. His other basic work, "Asian Drama," is a broad, pessimistic study of the roots of the vicious circle of poverty in developing nations.

Speaking to newsmen at New York City University, where he is a visiting professor, Myrdal said he was astonished by the attention he had received after the award was announced.

Whitehead Resigns

Washington (UPI) — William S. Whitehead resigned as chairman of the Renegotiation Board under criticism that the panel was not doing its duty to recover excess profits on defense contracts.

"I had hardly time to shave," he said.

In a more serious vein, Myrdal said inflation has brought with it a crisis in America's faith in government. He said anticipation of rising prices is a symptom of bad faith.

"What is really damaging to inflation is the anticipation. What you have to do is change the anticipation . . . You have to get people to believe that we are stopping this nonsense," he said.

Myrdal said Ford's anti-inflation measures proposed Tuesday were not enough. Wage and price controls are necessary to stabilize the economy, he said.

Regarding race relations, Myrdal said the country has made progress. "In a way, I would guess when you look at all the other horrors in the world, you do have progress," he said.

The academy described von Hayek's widely debated works on economic theory as "both profound and original." In a political book called "The Road to Serfdom," published in 1944, von Hayek critically analyzed the planned economy championed by Myrdal.

Von Hayek said the planned economy was like "a hunting dog with a big nose on a single track" while he advocated a searching for new solutions as would "a pack of dogs pursuing various trails."

The book had an impact on young economists in Soviet bloc countries discussing roads to "market socialism."

Both Myrdal and von Hayek took their doctorates in economics in 1927 and won professorships in Stockholm and London respectively in the early '30s. Both made regular pioneering contributions to the broadening of economic analysis: Myrdal with "The Political Elements in the Development of Economic Theory" in 1930 and von Hayek with "Prices and Production" in 1931 with new theories on business cycles. It was followed by "The Pure Theory of Capital."

Both spent important periods of their careers in the United States, von Hayek as social science professor at the University of Chicago between 1950 and 1962.

WASHINGTON — President Ford has now defined the economic crisis of the nation and proposed a catalogue of remedies. The question now is whether the solutions he proposed are equal to the crisis he defined, and the fear here is that he didn't bite the bullet but nibbled it.

In these abnormal times, and especially a month before the off-year congressional elections, he put forward some unpopular and politically bold proposals, but the whole thrust of his speech to the Congress was that the nation was in mortal danger and he asked that we mutually pledge to each other, not "our lives, our fortunes, and our sacred honor," but our comfort, our support, and 5% of our gas and oil.

It would be hard to over-emphasize the relief in Washington to find a President stating, with the utmost sincerity, his belief about what had to be done in the interests of the Republic. And for the first time in years, to see a Congress that accepts him at his word, without doubting his motives.

Still, his proposals, honest and sensible as they were, scarcely measure up to the spectacular menace and danger he put before the Congress. Inflation was as bad as war, he suggested, while refusing to call for a declaration of war. "We have had enough early warnings," he said. "... The time to intercept (the enemy inflation) is almost gone." But he didn't intercept it.

"I say to you with all sincerity," Ford remarked in the peroration of his speech, "that inflation, our present public enemy, will — unless it is whipped — destroy our country, our homes, our liberties, our property, and finally our national pride — as surely as any well-armed wartime enemy."

Maybe it was wrong to define the question in military terms, and even to regret the absence of a Pearl Harbor to wake us up, but when he got down to his 10-point program of remedies, he was bold in his own framework as a conservative Republican leader, but scarcely bold in the framework of the world problem he now has to handle.

problem is moving faster than he thought and the outlook now is that he is going to have to face seven per cent unemployment by mid-year of 1975. He made concessions, which must seem to him as almost radical, in offering public jobs to the unemployed and other breaks to the poor, but again his estimate is probably far short of the need.

Even most liberal economists agree that we don't need mandatory wage and price controls, but we do need much tougher controls over pattern-setting unions and businesses. Apparently, the President is convinced that he should start with appeals to patriotism, and voluntary controls that bark but don't bite. At least he has made a beginning.

In his speech to the Congress, he has told his colleagues in the executive branch, his old friends on Capitol Hill, and the American people what he wants them to do. It is early for him but late for the Congress, which is yearning to campaign for next month's election. If nothing else, he has clarified the problem for the average responsible family.

He has finally told them what he thinks they should do. We are in trouble, he has said. Whatever the President or, the Congress decides, we can't make it unless you save gas, oil, and money, and help the country in an awkward time.

This is typical of Gerald Ford. He sees the world crisis and suggests laws to deal with it, but basically he believes that appealing to the American people for voluntary sacrifices will work — or at least must be tried before introducing compulsory legislation, and he may be right.

He is still in that transition period between being a partisan leader and a national leader, and the world economic crisis has come down on him before he has had time to figure out the difference.

In his address to the Congress, he proposed policies which he would obviously have opposed in his 25 years in the House of Representatives, but he has still not caught up with the radical national and world economic problem his advisers in the cabinet are putting before him.

His instinct, and it is the center of his life, is that first you must go to the people — appeal to them, organize them, give them a chance — and only then, if they don't come through, pass laws to compel what the country needs. Washington admires but doubts that this will meet the national crisis he defined in such dramatic terms, but it likes him and believes in his sincerity, and his caution. At least he nibbled the bullet and this is probably about as much as the country is now prepared to swallow.

MARQUIS CHILDS

A Glenn-Carey Ticket For The 1976 Election?

NEW YORK — The free-wheeling euphoria of the Democrats set back by the Nixon resignation and the accession of Gerald Ford in the role of Mr. Clean is rising again. It is manifest here where Republicans have been dominant in state and national offices.

Rep. Hugh L. Carey, who won the Democratic nomination for governor over the choice of the old-line organization, is an odds-on favorite to defeat Gov. Malcolm Wilson. Wilson inherited the office when Nelson Rockefeller resigned in his fourth term as governor. Having lived so long under the Rockefeller shadow, Wilson has a slightly bleached look and his campaign is said to be lackluster.

With Carey, a Roman Catholic with 12 living children, ethnics comprising a sizeable proportion of the vote have one of their own at the top of the ticket. That veteran firehorse of politics and foreign policy, W. Averell Harriman, did a lot of the spade work to put Carey over in the primary against the organization candidate, Howard Samuels. For Harriman, this was a gratifying reversal of the back-of-the-hand treatment he received from McGovernites in 1972.

So strong is the upsurge of euphoria that it laps over into the Senate race where Jacob Javits had been considered a shoo-in for re-election to a fourth term. His Democratic opponent is Ramsey Clark, the controversial former U.S. attorney general who took up residence in the state to make the run. A barefoot candidate, Clark has limited contributions to $100.

At the urging of Sen. Claiborne Pell of Rhode Island, Javits visited Cuba. The first high officials of the American government to go there since Fidel Castro took over, they got short shrift from the bearded dictator. But at least Javits got on television and increasingly that is the name of the game — identity established on the tube.

This explains why fanciful crystal ball gazers are predicting a ticket for 1976 of John Glenn for President, Hugh Carey for vice president. Glenn is expected to win big for the Senate in Ohio over Cleveland's Mayor Ralph J. Perk.

As the first astronaut, Glenn has instant identity. In his second run for the Senate, he has proved a vigorous and effective campaigner. And as a sure-fire serial, it can be billed as "Son of Ike."

While Rockefeller in his long spell in the governorship made enemies among conservatives, his departure left a large hole in the Republican organization. Of the thousands of letters coming into the Senate Rules Committee in opposition to his confirmation as vice president, a sizeable share are from highly vocal Right to Life advocates denouncing him for his stand on abortion.

In a forthright message two years ago, Gov. Rockefeller vetoed a bill passed by the legislature repealing New York's liberal abortion law. Defending the right of a woman to make her own choice, he noted that the well-to-do could find ways to pay for an abortion regardless of the law. To close the clinics operating under the New York state law would condemn the underprivileged to unwanted children or to the hazards of an illegal abortion.

Carey has said that as a Catholic he is, of course, opposed to abortion. But he cited the Supreme Court ruling against state laws seeking to abolish or control the right of a woman to abortion as the law of the land.

The others trail far behind both Jackson and Alabama's Gov. George Wallace. Sen. Walter Mondale, one of the ablest and most personable of the potentials, has a 2% recognition.

Jackson owes a lot of his margin to the fact that he made a pass at the presidency in 1972 and got some television coverage. What instant identity means, as in the example of John Glenn, is that the prime requisite of television with its fantastic cost can be circumvented.

Variety Or Unity In Landscape?

Close to 10,000 trees have been planted in the city right-of-way along Lincoln streets in the last three years, and City Forester Wayne Willmeng says that hopefully Lincoln will catch up with replacemnts for disease-stricken trees and what is needed in the way of new plantings in about ten years.

Some 15,000 trees will ultimately be planted to replace Lincoln's dying elm tree population of 25,000 along city streets and new plantings in areas now barren of trees will add to that total. Willmeng's crews are now marking sites — about 3,000 — for next spring's contract planting.

Aerial photographs and on-site inspection tell the city where trees are needed in each of 19 areas — each approximately 4 miles square — into which the city is divided. Within each area, the oldest subdivisions are planted first and each area gets some new trees each year. Thus is arranged Lincoln's vigorous street tree replacement program which, along with the downtown planting program, is worthy of a community which has been known as a "city of trees."

But, like many other worthy programs, it is not immune to criticism. The criticism stems from the rather arbitrary regulations under which the program is administered.

Although parallel streets are not planted with the same species to curtail the possible rapid spread of disease, only one species is planted on a given street — and it is the kind of tree picked by the city after consideration of the width of the planting area, whether or not there are overhead wires, and something which can loosely be described as the "character of the neighborhood." A property owner can't negotiate with the city over the type of tree he would like in the city easement in front of his property. It is either the city's choice or no tree at all, whichever the owner prefers. The only exception is when an entire neighborhood can agree on one alternative which still must be acceptable to the city.

Species are not mixed on the same street, Willmeng says, because to do so would violate the unifying landscape effect the city wants to achieve and because one species on a street cuts down on maintenance costs (only one type of spray is needed, rather than several, for example).

There are people in Lincoln, however, who don't care for the unifying landscape effect and who desire to stand the expense of providing variety not only inside their property line but in the city right-of-way in front of it. They would rather plant a tree of their own choice than accept the city's gift.

There is something to be said for the city bowing to individual taste, or at least allowing for some negotiation. It would help promote the traditional interest of Lincolmites in tree planting and also provide the city with a varied landscape. At any rate, there is more than casual interest in the subject and we think it is worthy of official discussion.

The State Of Preparedness

From the standpoint of blissful economic ignorance, it occurs to us that President Ford is taking on a tiger with a pop-gun.

"I say to you with all sincerity that inflation, our present public enemy, will — unless it is whipped — destroy our country, our homes, our liberties, our property and finally our national pride as surely as any well-armed wartime enemy," the President solemnly warned Congress Tuesday.

That is wholesale destruction in anybody's book and if the enemy is truly at the front gate, one can only shudder at the possibility that we may be as unprepared to fight this war as we were before Pearl Harbor. After the grim warning, the President gave a basic pep rally speech.

He recognized the need to legislate in behalf of those hurt most by inflation — the poor, the unemployed and the housing industry among them — and the need to stimulate production. There is little to quarrel with in that.

But how can one accurately estimate the gravity of inflation and the energy situation when the President's strategy primarily relies on voluntary conservation and a self-enforced austere diet?

And how can those affected react to the tax surcharge in a spirit of sacrifice and patriotism when Congress should be asked to perform major loophole-closing surgery on the tax laws to raise revenue and restore equity?

In all, it probably is not a bad package offered by an administration which must work somewhat at cross-purposes in trying to stimulate the economy on the one hand while trying to bring inflation under control on the other.

But is it enough if the nation is about to be destroyed, as Ford insists? We are not any more in favor of the "quick fix" or mandatory controls of all kinds than the President but if the situation is as grim as he says it is, that is where the road will lead us.

Unless of course, a responsible Congress and a renewed sense of citizen sacrifice can bail the President out of this one.

Crisis In Livestock

Wilber, Neb.

I noticed a piece lately where Curtis was putting down Governor Exon for not having a proposal for solving the crisis in the livestock market. So who is he to call the kettle black? Anyway, he has been in office many more years than Governor Exon and if he had been on the ball, working for the good of the Nebraska consumers and farmers, then maybe there wouldn't have been any crisis.

Curtis should take a good long look at the gap between the meat processor and the consumer. Who gets the blame for everything? The farmers. It is easy just to sit back and howl for someone else to come up with an answer to a problem and do nothing about it yourself. As I see it, this is what Curtis is doing. What proposals has he come up with to solve the crisis?

I do agree that it would be unfair to force anyone to buy meat with food stamps, so both Hruska and Curtis have suggested, with color-coded food stamps to be used only for buying meat. This would help just the grocery stores and the meat processors' sales, but do nothing for the consumer and the price of groceries.

If Curtis wants the poor families to have nutritious meals, then let him come up with a reasonable and working proposals to reduce the cost of food in the grocery stores. In my opinion, that would be to hit the processors, big business and the like.

Curtis doesn't even talk a good game. All he does is to sit back and let someone else find the answer. The only way this trouble can be ended is for all of us to put our heads together. After all, we are all in this together.

Church-Related Aid

Lincoln, Neb.

Is it lack of communication, religious bias or what else? How did all this anxiety over supporting church programs by the Lincoln Community Services arise? As far as the Catholic Social Service is concerned, in 1973 the United Fund contributed to this church-related agency $31,846 and the church-related agency spent another $49,382 for community service. In addition to this, this church-related agency sponsored a group home for teenage juvenile offenders and has expended an additional sum of $28,111. Statistics will show that 85% of the care given through Cristo Rey was to boys who were not members of the church. These figures ought to answer who is helping whom.

Is the United Fund helping the church or is the church responsibly helping the community? Who gives more, United Fund or the church? The "proclamation not to discriminate" is a laugh. When it was not desirable or fashionable, St. Thomas Orphanage, a church-related children's home, was open to children of minority races.

The board and staff of Catholic Social Service has representation of minorities and other church affiliates. The chairman of the Catholic Social Service Executive Committee was Jewish and over the past five years, three of its board members were Protestant clergymen.

Questions were raised about programs like the Pre-Cana Conferences and Birthright. Pre-Cana is a marriage orientation course for engaged couples coordinated by Catholic Social Service. Birthright is another separate organization composed of volunteer women who are "pro-life" advocates who refer to Catholic Social Service. Not one nickel from the United Funds was invested in either program.

On this date, I am sending the Community Services a financial account for both of these programs to substantiate my statement. Should any reader be interested in obtaining a copy of these financial reports, please request by letter and enclose a stamped envelope.

Let's be united so we can truly say, "Thanks to you, it's working."

The League is especially indebted to the news media — radio, television and newspaper — who so ably covered all

I don't know why knowledgeable people try these things. I mean the latest attempt by Mr. Crosby to subvert our Constitution. He wants a damage bond enforced before anyone can bring a taxpayer's suit.

This is directly in violation of all our freedoms. These suits are not brought against individuals but against bureaucrats who have stepped over the line in their fiscal ideas.

The bureaucrat has no vested interest, although many times he acts as if he does. Mr. Crosby is an ex-bureaucrat and perhaps thinks like one.

Anyone who does not want to be saddled with an intolerable bureaucracy should inform his senator to vote against this bill for which Mr. Crosby will lobby.

When we give up our right to sue the bureaucracy without putting up a great deal of our money while they retain the right to use the taxpayers' money clear up to the Supreme Court, then our republican form of democracy has been turned over to them, lock, stock and barrel, and we are merely cogs in a vast machine to furnish their needs and not necessarily our own.

In the Sept. 30 issue of The Star, there was a brief news item which stated that police officer Brian Daniels was released from the hospital which was, of course, good news. However, the paragraph ended by stating that he had been struck by a car while directing traffic at 56th and A "after Saturday's night's Plus X football game" (note the double possessive!).

I am wondering why it was stated in this manner, for although the accident did occur in the vicinity of Plus X High School, the Thunderbolts not only played their game on Friday night but were in Minden for it.

It just seems to me that Star reporters should have the facts before writing such an item. The game that night was between two other schools, both of which would quite likely have drivers using A Street when leaving Seacrest Field.

Attorney, 91, Earns M.A. Degree

By ROBERT PETERSON
We've long advocated back-to-school programs for folks past 60 seeking new horizons. Quite a few sexagenarians and septuagenarians have given higher education a whirl, and we've even interviewed two or three octogenarians who have taken the challenge and actually enrolled for classes at various schools and colleges.

But the blue ribbon in this category must surely go to Fred B. Noble of Jacksonville, Fla. Last Aug. 25, this still active attorney completed required courses of study at Jacksonville University and was awarded his M.A. degree in teaching at the age of 91.

What's more, Noble enjoys good health and is still endowed with sufficient ambition and motivation to say he'd like to launch a brand new career as a teacher and educator.

According to officials at this university, Noble is probably the oldest person ever to have earned an advanced degree. His previous educational attainments include an A.B. degree earned at Washington College in 1902, a law degree earned at Harvard University in 1906, and a B.A. degree earned at Jacksonville University in 1967.

Nonogenarian Noble is obviously one of those rare humans who defies stereotypes of aging. Instead of succumbing to the usual infirmities and frailties, he just goes on living much the same active pattern of life he has followed for decades.

At 91, he still walks to his law office every day for a stint of work. He teaches an adult class once a week at the Snyder Memorial United Methodist Church in Jacksonville. And he spends several weeks each year traveling to faraway places.

During spring vacation this year he traveled to Yugoslavia, and then hurried back for classes to complete work on his M.A. degree.

We hope geriatricians, retirement experts, and newsmen everywhere beat a path to Noble's door and give him the wide publicity and recognition he deserves. He's the Grandma Moses of the back-to-school set and his achievements should set an example for millions of elders who mistakenly believe they're over the hill at 80.

We also hope a team of scientists and physicians will descend on him and study his life pattern in depth. Chances are he harbors vital secrets for health which should be useful to the millions of us who earnestly aspire to reaching 91 in good health but who have our doubts that fate will cooperate.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Accent is on change, variety, ability to treasure what is worthwhile and to get rid of sham. Taurus, Libra persons figure in picture. Young, vigorous persons are drawn to you and your own life juices are stimulated.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Don't fool yourself about values, difficulties, maneuvers and red tape. Be prepared to do battle. Means you are in corner and someone wants you to remain in that spot. Key now is to be specific, to have facts at hand and to sharpen sense of timing.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Short trip could lead to profits. Relative puts responsibility on your shoulder. With it also goes potential for reward. Go into business for yourself — in sense that ideas are put into action. Cancer, Capricorn could be in picture.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Accent is on money, personal possessions, how to pay and collect. You learn now what should be discarded, retained. Key is to do something about your knowledge. Money and security dominate picture, which reveals you ending one phase and about to begin anew.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Lunar cycle is such that you make new starts, stimulate, accent originality, independence. Another Leo — and an Aquarian — could figure prominently. Trust your judgment, intuition. Get going. Be a self-starter! What is mysterious intrigues you, more so than usual. You get in the wings, backstage. You want access to confidential files. You get what you want and you also deal "heavily" with family situations, problems.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Emphasis now is on gain through professional endeavors, joy through flattery from opposite sex and fulfillment of a basic desire. Obviously, this could be a day for the memory book! Gemini, Sagittarius individuals could play roles.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You will be dealing with higher-ups; there can also be room for you at top. Key now is to take aim and fire toward goal. Refuse to take back seat. Be sure of material. Then state case in frank manner, backing position with factual information. If so, you win.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Spotlight is on learning process, philosophy and education. Long journey and communications also could be part of your day. Change and variety combine and you are excited by your prospects, potential. Gemini, Virgo individuals are part of the picture.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Dig deep for information, especially where money, policies, taxes are concerned. Someone else may be holding key you seek. Answers are obtainable only after inquiries. Investigation. Taurus, Libra could figure prominently.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Play waiting game. Time is on your side. Be sure of legal green light. Emphasis is on public reaction to your statements, promises, efforts. Partner, mate figure prominently. Let others reveal their plans.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Keep medical, dental appointments — or make them, if necessary. Accent is on health, general well being, basic issues and employment. Find a more streamlined method of serving and being served.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are more creative than the average person. You are also independent, an innovator and attractive to opposite sex. December will be one of your most significant months of 1974. Domestic adjustment, possible change of residence is indicated for 1975. You draw to you persons born under Leo and Aquarius.

by

Stan Delaplane

San Francisco — Off to my weekly gig with the hair-raising Lady. "It really is looking better," she said. (Brave soul!) "If you're not growing more hair, what you have has more body." This is a witchy chick. She brews her own lotions. She had a new one to try on me. "It's a little wheat germ oil," she said rubbing it into my scalp. I said: "Is that what smells?" She said: "No, that must be the garlic." I said: "Garlic? What's going on here?" "And a raw egg," she said. "A fertile egg." She put me under a dryer. I sat there giving off the scent of a hot Caesar salad.

The first rain blew over the hills. A taste of the winter to come. I moved the outdoor barbecue inside.

I'm not much on cooking out when I've got a perfectly good stove in the kitchen. But we live in a society where the barbecue spatula is the status symbol. We cook outside — (where the neighbors can see us) — or we die of shame.

Too early to tell how President Ford will go down in history. Looking over the men who sat in 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue, I find nearly all are remembered for outdoor activities. Mr. Eisenhower was a cookout man. Barbecued at Palm Springs. In one year he cooked 23 meals in that desert Paradise — rare, medium and well done. J. F. Kennedy played touch football. He advised the Marines to take a 50-mile hike.

Franklin D. Roosevelt stood on the bridges of Navy ships wearing a nautical cape. Mr. Hoover caught a trout. A press agent was assigned to "humanize" Hoover who apparently didn't appear human to the electorate. They put the President in waders. The Secret Service hooked a patriotic Republican trout on the end of the line.

Mr. Hoover then reeled him in. Harry Truman was a walker.

That's the way I remember my presidents. Not by the treaties they signed or laws they had made. I remember them by their outdoor occupations.

This outdoors thing may be the reason outdoor cooking has lasted so long and been so important.

We put the barbecue in plastic wrap. Small birds are flying south. The gulls are bobbing on the water under gray, weeping skies. It's a bad day for fishing. The hair-raising Lady washed the salad dressing off me. She blew my hair around with a hot air comb. She said: "It really does look fuller."

Only 14% Of Women Prefer Ms.

By TERRY RYAN
New York (AP) — Mrs. ? or Ms. ?
Only 14% of the women surveyed in a national opinion poll released Thursday said they preferred the feminist designation Ms.
The American Women's Opinion Poll, conducted by the Roper Organization, surveyed about 3,000 women on a variety of subjects, with a separate poll of 1,000 men for statistical purposes. The Roper Organization said the results of the poll were statistically valid within 2% as national averages.
It reported that more than half the women surveyed want to combine marriage, children and careers. Sixteen per cent said wives should not vow to obey their husbands in marriage.
Three of five women under 30 said one or two children was enough, the poll reported. Premarital sex was viewed as immoral by 53% of the women, down from 65% in 1970.
Mamie Eisenhower and Walter Cronkite headed the list of people most respected by women. Former President Richard M. Nixon ranked 10th on the list of respected men in the poll, which was conducted in May, prior to his resignation.

Black social activist Angela Davis was ranked as the least respected woman by 53% of the women polled. However, 39% of the black women interviewed rated her the woman they most respect. Blacks constituted 11% of the women surveyed.
While only 14% of the women and 13% of the men said they favored the use of Ms., those figures were up from 10% of women and 11% of men in a Roper study six months earlier. Ms. was preferred by 29% of the single women and 33% of the separated or divorced women.
Fifty-seven per cent of both men and women said they were very satisfied with their lives. In 1972, 58% of the women and 49% of the men said they were very satisfied. Among blacks, there was a significant increase in the numbers reporting themselves very satisfied with life. Forty-eight per cent of the black women and 54% of the black men reported themselves very satisfied with their own lives, up from 37% of the women and 32% of the men in 1972.

Intelligence was cited as the quality most admired by both men and women. While 26% of the men said sex appeal was the most admired female quality, only 6% of the women listed it as the most admired male quality.
Sixty per cent of the women said they favored divorce, up from 52% in 1970. Only one woman in 10 said a couple should stay together because of children, a reason widely regarded in the past as an argument against divorce.

'Marriage Penalty'
Tax laws create a "disincentive to marriage." If a woman earns $2,000 per year and marries a man who earns $3,000 a year, together they will pay $184 more in federal income tax than if they had remained single.
70% Are Man-Made
Today 70% of the fibers which go into clothing for women and children are man-made — as are 40% of the fibers in men's and boys' clothing. Man-mades are used to make 93% of our carpets and 81% of our blankets.

The Terrible 2's, A Very Trying Age

By RICHARD FLASTE
Cambridge, Mass. — In child-rearing, it's not for nothing that the "Terrible Two's" are called terrible. The period, which actually usually encompasses ages from about 18 months to 2½ years, frequently evidences the following:
— Parents who've just completed overseeing a blissful infancy suddenly find themselves in charge of a willful, nay-saying tantrum-throwing toddler.
— The child, too young to be at school or otherwise gainfully employed outside the house, is continually under foot, dawn to dusk, except at naptime, when he agrees to relax enough to fall asleep.
— The child has mastered the art of cajoling, a skill that is incredibly exasperating especially at bedtime, when it becomes the more-drink syndrome.
— The child, laughing and independent on occasion, turns morose and clinging in strange situations, such as a visit from Aunt Frances (She's "not very friendly," Aunt Frances observes).
If a good bit of the above sounds like your family, Dr. T. Berry Brazelton wants a word with you. He's a pediatrician and the chief of the Child Development Unit at the Children's Hospital Medical Center in Boston. His new book, "Toddlers and Parents" (Delacorte Press) is a kind of compendium of difficulties that parents face during this period, which he contends is harder than any other, except perhaps the teen-age years.
"From the parents' point of view," he said the other day in his modest office here, "this is a horrible time."
But he said he thinks it can be enjoyed (Some parents do find children a delight at this age, he points out) if they realized that the turmoil is natural, and, more than that, is necessary to proper development. Knowing that, he says, "gets parents off the hook."

He wants to tell parents that the turbulence they're experiencing "didn't all come from them, it wasn't all their mistakes."
This is a period when a child is learning an astounding number of things — to talk, to control bodily functions and to express his will.
Brazelton, in fact, worries about children who are "too good" during these years. Maybe that means they're not resolving a struggle now that will only have to be resolved later. (That's his explanation for the temper tantrums that flare in infantile adults.)
"Unless parents can allow a child a certain freedom to get it out on the surface," he said, "to get angry one minute, be delighted the next, to have a tantrum because he can't decide whether to go in or out of a room when nobody cares but him, unless a parent can allow those things, the child can't really resolve the kinds of struggles that are absolutely vital to his development."
All that is not to say that it's fine to allow the child to carve a path of destruction wherever he toddles. Brazelton is certain that children do need limits — when a situation is unsafe or has gotten out of hand. He said he thinks that limits can be enforced with discipline, perhaps a harsh word first, and, if that fails, maybe by physically restraining the child, then spanking, if it comes to that.
"I think a mother and father can feel terribly guilty when they spank a child," he said, "but there are times when you just have to — there's no other way to reach them, to let them know that that's enough."

Little Man Asks Then Disappears

Albert Benjamin, writing in the (British) Bridge Magazine, tells the story of the little man he keeps running into.
He likes the man, all right, except for his one idiosyncrasy. It seems that the little man shows Benjamin a hand, asks him what he would bid with it, waits for the answer, and then disappears. Benjamin doesn't learn whether the answer is right or wrong.
For example, the little man asks Benjamin what he would bid as South if West opened two hearts, North passed, East bid two spades, and South had: ♠ K J 7 4 ♥ 8 3 ♦ A K Q 10 9 5 2 ♣ —.
Benjamin says that there is a substantial doubt in his mind whether it is tactically better to mention his diamonds at this point, or to pass in the hope that North will lead a club against a slam in hearts that West might bid.

Women Expand

The average American woman is 35-36-37. Just a generation ago she was 34-25-36. She has grown one inch in all directions, including up. These figures have been compiled by the National Bureau of Standards.

Keep Airtight, Cold

Airtight and cold are two good pointers to remember when storing cheese. A heavy plastic wrap or container that fits the cheese closely is recommended to prevent cheese from drying out. Cold, preferably in the refrigerator, is necessary to prevent cheese from "oiling off."

Vary Potato Recipe

Next time you prepare scalloped potatoes, vary the recipe by adding shredded Swiss cheese to your white sauce along with a hint of basil and some chopped green onions. It's a nice flavor change from your usual recipe.

Opening lead — three of hearts.
Declarer plays the two from dummy and discards the jack of diamonds. When West continues with a heart, South discards his king of diamonds on the ace of hearts.
Declarer then plays the K-A of spades, leads diamonds twice from dummy, trapping East's A-Q, discards all his clubs on the diamonds, and thus makes the slam!

Panel Discusses Death And Dying

By GRACIA McANDREW
Star Staff Writer

"Everybody wants to know about death, but no one wants to ask about it," said local funeral director Cliff Lant. He was a panel participant Wednesday at a workshop investigating "Perspectives on Dying, Death and Grief."

Among the items emphasized were professional and personal attitudes toward death, facing one's own death, the experience of grief.

"My husband went instantly at home. He had a heart attack," said Mrs. Delpha Luhr. "On the way to the hospital I felt that the attendants were doing all they could, but I knew he wasn't going to make it."

"And as we got into Lincoln General Hospital, I felt very alone. But I was very thankful for one nurse who took me off in a room. She didn't say anything, she was just there."

For Jackie Turner, who lost a three and one-half year-old daughter in a fire last year, it was a question of how to respond to the grief.

"You talk about how you should grieve, but I'd never been in a grieving situation before," she said. "I didn't know how I should grieve, how I should act."

"A fireman told me that Sarah was dead. I didn't accept her death for several weeks, I kept expecting her to come back."

When not actually involved in the situation, it usually appears that grief has a certain pattern, Ms. Turner pointed out. "In a month you should do this, in two months you should be here. But it is different for everyone."

"I don't really know when I finally accepted her death. I can't pick out a day and say that's when I knew she was really dead."

"I had to have help in accepting my anger. I couldn't blame the doctors, they didn't have anything to do with it. The only person I could think of was God and I didn't think I should be angry with Him," she said with a smile.

"He is a pretty big man and He might not let me get into Heaven to see Sarah."

According to physician Bruce McMullen, professionals, too, are faced with the dilemma of dealing with death.

To many it may seem that doctors and nurses take death lightly and in the hospital circles professionals may respond to a death by "laughing it off," explained McMullen.

"Doctors have to get rid of pent-up emotion when patients die," he said. "Sometimes at a hospital during a week patients die left and right. When you have several patients die, you kinda have to laugh it off."

"You have to, because if you don't the tension will be so great that you can't think."

"A lot of times nurses seem not to care about the patient or the family," concurred Joanne Heidesch, RN. "But the stress level is so high we may laugh it off. But we really don't think it is a joke. We really do care."

But what about the person who knows he is dying?

Scott Helt, a graduate student in social work, noted that he faced a diagnosis of acute leukemia "with resignation, anger, depression, hope."

"Often patients will adjust themselves to respond to the supposed needs of the family," said Gordon Simmons, assistant minister of the First Lutheran Church. "They often don't want to talk about it when the spouse or family is around."

"When in the hospital, pressure is placed on the patient," Helt pointed out.

Helt explained that many times if the patient is grieving or vocal the nurse is likely to point out that he is upsetting his family or the person in the next room.

"So the patient tries to conform to the ways in which he is expected to act," he said. "Patients should be allowed to ventilate their feelings with no imposition or sanctions."

"But often the nurse or the hospital social worker feels threatened or is too concerned with the maintenance or smooth-running of the hospital."

Also, according to John Paolini, chaplain supervisor for Bryan Memorial Hospital, patients are bombarded with all kinds of philosophies on death from people, all of whom are talking from their own experiences.

Therefore, "the patient is a cafeteria with all kinds of philosophies to pick from," he said. "It is really confusing."

Thaw Cheese Slowly

To thaw cheese properly, leave it in its wrapper and let it thaw slowly in the refrigerator. This is the best way of preventing flavor loss and moisture.

Whether Good Or Bad, Grief Always Hurts

"There are helpful and unhelpful ways of grieving," noted John Paolini, chaplain supervisor for Bryan Memorial Hospital. "But good or bad, it all hurts."

Paolini spoke Wednesday on "Good Grief" during a workshop on "Dying, Death and Grief."

According to Paolini, grief is selfish

"We grieve for ourselves, not for the person who died," he said. "We grieve because that person was an extension of our own personality."

Paolini also pointed out that "the ability to grieve begins in childhood."

"If a child loses a pet, help him grieve, because it will help him later in life. The coping devices we learned as a child we use now, so grief is very individual."

"Also, if the feelings of love are ambivalent as a child, grieving as an adult will be confusing too," he emphasized, adding that everyone has to have a feeling of worth, so that during grief one will have something to fall back on.

Paolini also advised that during the young years children should distribute their satisfaction to many people. "Then the loss of just one won't be so great."

In addition, Paolini explained that there are certain stages in the grief process.

"The first stage is the shocking blow of the loss itself," he noted. "I have found that at this time, the person doesn't need much — there's not much anxiety."

Following the initial shock is the numbing effect, which Paolini describes as "nature's way of protecting the organism."

He Needs Dad For A Friend

DEAR ABBY: I needed some Scotch tape so I looked in my son's desk for some, and noticed the beginning of a letter my son had written to his girl friend. It read, "I am only interested in being stoned, spending money and sex."

I red no further. My first impulse was to confront him with this, but then he would say I had no right to go snooping through his desk.

I don't think I should go on ignoring this. I would appreciate some advice. He is 18½.

BEWILDERED FATHER

DEAR FATHER: You could be about 17 years too late. It won't help you now to be reminded that you failed to build the kind of father-son relationship that inspires trust, confidence and total honesty. It's possible that what you read did not reflect your son's thoughts accurately, however.

Don't tell him what you saw, but try to get a dialogue going so you can get inside his head. Encourage honesty, and no matter what he says, be cool, and don't put him down or make him feel guilty. If you can develop candid two-way communication, you'll be able to influence and eventually help your son. He doesn't need punishment, Father, he needs a mature understanding friend.

DEAR ABBY: About a week before our daughter and her steady graduated from high school, they told us that she was pregnant and they wanted to get married.

There was a long silence, then my husband said: "We've all made mistakes in our lives, but some of us never got caught. Now you two kids will have to excuse us for five minutes while we plan our daughter's wedding."

Then Dad led me into the bedroom, handed me $25 and said: "Let's see if you're as smart about money now as you were 25 years ago."

Needless to say, time was short, so I went downtown the next morning and bought six yards of yellow cotton, two simple formal patterns, two yards of pink lace, two yards of ivory lace, and some pink and ivory ribbon — all for less than $10. (I had $15 left over for the flowers and reception. Boy, I had money to burn!)

My younger daughter (age 15) and I made the dresses. I baked the wedding cake and made punch. Only the very immediate families were invited to the wedding.

Our minister performed the ceremony in front of our fireplace, which was decorated with greenery from our garden and two white candles. The girls were beautiful in their simple dresses with their long black hair tied back with ribbons to match their dresses. The bride carried a single ivory carnation, and her sister, a pink carnation.

We made sure the fridge was

dear abby

well stocked, and Dad, Sister and I spent the weekend in a neighboring town with Dad's brother.

Dad says I'm still as smart about money as I was 25 years ago.

NO NAMES PLEASE

DEAR NO: You're not only smart about money, you are wise about other things, too. And so is your husband.

DEAR ABBY: Three cheers for the young mother who had the courage to admit that she felt "stuck" with her two kids who were both accidents.

I have one child, but she wasn't an accident. I really wanted a child, but I soon realized that I wasn't cut out to be a mother. I have never abused my child, but I am positive that I do not want another one.

Now if my in-laws and friends would just leave me alone, and quit telling me how "wrong" it is to raise only one child, I would appreciate it.

And if this letter is printed, I hope my husband's family in New Jersey reads it and sees the light. Thank you.

ONE IS BEAUTIFUL IN N.Y.

DEAR ONE: Leave nothing so important to chance. Clip this column and mail it to them.

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

door open) and breakfast is not a required meal.

In fact, North Hall has much the same atmosphere as college dorms of the 1960's which locked up at 10:30 p.m. weekdays and 1 a.m. weekends, said Sally Johnson, an inmate who holds a master's degree from the University of Montana.

And the cost, $13 to $15, a day to house inmates at the York Center is about the same as the "cost to live in my sorority house back when I went to college," she said.

The variety of programs, from high school diploma to college credit classes, from social and cultural clubs to work-release programs and 24-hour furloughs, was described by inmate Joanne Dixon.

Under a new program, the first in the country, York inmates may have their children in prison for one- to seven-day visits.

Despite all the programs, a woman gets out of York what she puts into it, the panel members said. "The most important thing a woman has to have is the right attitude," said Mrs. Anderson.

"There's no pressure for what your in for; it's what you do while you are in there," said Mrs. Anderson.

York, a small prison, has much less violence than larger prisons. Mrs. Dixon told the crowd of more than 60 people "You do have to fight for your life in the larger ones."

While York has individual rooms for each inmate and a variety of programs, there are institutions in the country with iron bars and crowded cells, the inmates said.

"My state doesn't have any place for their naughty ladies so they ship them off to York," said Mrs. Johnson, with a characteristic display of witty sarcasm.

And the York prison is much better the Montana "dungeon," complete with iron bars, no recreation and an exercise area within the 20-foot wall, she said.

While the women, accompanied by a center staff member, gave very little criticism of the institution, they did point out the low pay scale — 10 cents for scrubbing a shower — and made light of some of the most detestable work details.

Perhaps the most hated detail, the "furnace room" was described by the 4-foot-10-inch Mrs. Johnson. The work consists of keeping 10 very heavy garbage pails clean and buffing the floor with a huge, industrial buffer that she affectionately named "Boris."

The inmates did mention several areas where programs are needed, including more vocational training in skilled jobs—secretarial and business—and some counseling programs to help inmates families during the adjustment period when a woman returns to society.

Mary Jo Ryan, director of the University Child Care Project will discuss "The New Student," Wednesday at the UNL student Union during the fifth Women/Speak program, sponsored by the Student Y.

If you think that women in Nebraska's prison are locked in bar-lined, concrete cells, wear shapeless gray uniforms, sleep three to a cell on iron bunks and spend their days fighting, you're wrong.

A panel of three Nebraska Center For Women inmates, makeup carefully applied, dressed in attractive pants outfits, dispelled any notions that the York center "is hell" while admitting that it is no "fun house" either.

York, which currently houses 63 women and is the only women's reformatory for Nebraska and four nearby states, was described during the fourth Women/Speak '74 presentation as a modern institution with a variety of programs.

"They do feed you and they don't beat you," said Teresa Anderson as she explained how women earn the right to move up section by section from almost total confinement to the many liberties of the trusty wing.

After an initial 21 to 35 days locked up in the "segregated section" an inmate moves to East Hall, gets her curlers and jewelry back and begins the normal prison schedule—breakfast at 7 a.m. then a day of work, and often school.

From East Hall an inmate earns the right to move up to pre-trusty status in West Hall, where there are three late nights (inmates may stay up beyond the 10 a.m. deadline).

The women with the most privileges and responsibilities are the 24 trusties who live in the central air-conditioned North Hall, where visitors are allowed in each woman's room (with the

Real Estate Panel Revokes Licenses

By United Press International

The State Real Estate Commission Wednesday revoked a broker's license and a salesman's license and suspended another broker's license for seven days.

Suspended for a seven-day period was the broker's license of Byron Reed Co. in connection with a complaint filed in Omaha by Ernest Addison.

The commission said the real estate firm erroneously informed Addison on zoning for property that was to have been purchased by him for $190,000.

Revoked was the broker's license of Stanley R. Voecks, doing business as Better Homes Realty in Omaha, for failure to turn over an insurance refund to Rose Trader.

The salesman's license of George R. Pabian of Omaha was revoked because, according to the commission, he gave false information when he filed for a broker's license.

Mensa Members Score In Top 2%

By PATTY BEUTLER
Star Staff Writer

Intelligence quotient (I.Q.) is the common denominator that brings Mensa members together in Lincoln and all over the world.

Mensa (Latin for "table"), labels itself the only international society where all members are intelligent.

What it takes to join this heady society is "smarts" . . . and acceptable scores on certain supervised tests (e.g. over 130 on standard I.Q. tests).

In Top 2%
By passing these tests all of the dozen or so members in Lincoln find themselves in the top 2% of the population intelligence-wise. That's the cut-off point for Mensa eligibility.

Why people join varies as much as the professions, interests and life-styles of the members.

No stamp collections in common or specialized interests in sports cars are needed to spark conversation at monthly meetings. People just bring themselves and that's stimulation enough, members say.

'Ego Trip'
For Lincolnite Max G. Ross, qualifying for Mensa was an "ego-trip." The desire to know if he could attain membership was as tempting for Ross as simple curiosity about the organization.

In the insurance field, Ross finds Mensa a good potential for broadening his personal knowledge and contacts. "It enables a person to diversify his contacts with life, such as it is."

Most of the people Ross deals with on a daily basis are connected with his occupation or his veterans' organization. He says he's not denied intelligent intercourse in these situations, but sees Mensa as a chance to further broaden himself through an entirely different set of contacts.

"Besides, meeting with people and talking to them is fun," he confided.

Elite Group
Ross denies that Mensa is an elite group. "Anyone who has the God-given ability can be a member," he contends.

Planner Sees Signs Of Lack Of Accord

By LYNN ZERSCHLING
Star Staff Writer

There are signs that Lincoln has grown to a point where citizens can no longer pull together and agree on the city's future, one of the city's consultants warned Wednesday night.

But, Barton-Aschman planner Bob Teska said because of Lincoln-Lancaster County's "extraordinary history of planning," the community should pull through.

Teska's remarks were directed at some 100 people attending the Junior League's and Lincoln Community Services' first "Pieces of a City" series designed to foster citizen participation in the community.

Number Of Issues
Barton-Aschman consultants, which are supervising the update of the city-county Comprehensive Plan, will attack a number of issues which could divide the community, Teska said.

One such issue is "the battle of Stevens Creek," the watershed which borders the eastern fringe of the city and into which the City Council generally has been restricting development.

Another issue is construction

Fine Arts Chair Established At Doane College

Crete (UPI) — With security from a life insurance policy valued at $300,000, Doane College said it has established a permanently-endowed chair of fine arts.

The college's Board of Trustees was told Wednesday that the gift was made by Dr. Virginia Hastings Floyd, Tucson, Ariz., and her mother, Mrs. Dorothy Hastings. Grant, in memory of their late father and husband, George B. Hastings, chair of fine arts.

Hastings practiced law in Grant for 50 years and was a Doane trustee from 1950 until his death in 1967.

His daughter has been on the University of Arizona faculty as professor of speech communications and is currently associated with the New Mexico School for the Performing Arts.

It'll Take More

Chicago (UPI) — Conservation alone will not solve the nation's energy problems, Atomic Energy Commission Chairman Dixie Lee Ray said.

The society, he added, has the potential for doing good. On the national level, the group is lobbying for improved school curricula for gifted children and for upgraded library facilities in state penitentiaries.

However, on the local level for the time being, no project proposals are on the drawing boards.

"We're not geniuses," offered Frank Cole, a medical doctor and president of the local Mensa group, which is a part of the Nebraska-Western Iowa chapter.

Hesitated
A new member himself, Dr. Cole had heard of Mensa for years, but had hesitated to take the qualifying exams. Last year he decided "the worst I could do is fail," so he took the plunge and passed with flying colors.

"It's not a matter of egotism and pride," he asserts. "If many people had the courage and desire to take the tests, they too would pass."

Sporting a tiny, plain yellow pin in his left label that singles him out as a Mensa, Dr. Cole admitted, however, that "we're not that immodest."

But he was quick to add that members polk fun at themselves with humorous "certificates" that recognize their intelligence. "These show we don't take ourselves too seriously," he pointed out.

No Aloofness
There's no aloofness or feeling of superiority among members, says Dr. Cole.

At least there is no more so, he notes, than if he were a duplicate bridge player with so many master points or a baseball player with a .300 batting average.

"It's just more satisfying for me to know I've got a high I.Q. than a 300 batting average," he added.

Lawyers, housewives, doctors, students and insurance people make up the Lincoln group and they are willing to expand their numbers.

For those who are tempted, but might be intimidated, Dr. Cole assures that it's "hard to distinguish this group from any other social or discussion group around."

of new shopping centers versus revitalizing the central business district.

Teska termed the City Council's recent rejection of three shopping center applications as courageous. An additional tough stand has been taken by city fathers, he said, in sponsoring a downtown redevelopment plan and supporting the proposed Centrum in downtown Lincoln.

The Centrum is a proposed parking garage and merchandising complex proposed for the block from 11th to 12th, N to O.

'Where Is Support?'
But Teska, vice president of the Chicago consulting firm, challenged his audience, "Where is the public support to implement these plans?"

Teska asserted that the public sector "can't do this by itself." One step citizens can take is to become involved in the updating of the Comprehensive Plan process, he said.

Teska said the city's $189,000 bill for updating the plan is "a reasonable investment in your future. The cost of not planning is far greater than the cost of planning."

Growth Blueprint
Revision of the plan — designed to be a blueprint of the city's and county's growth — is warranted he said, because:

— The present 13-year-old plan is becoming outdated because of age.

— The Goals and Policies report formulated by citizens in 1972 will "mean nothing" until implemented into a plan.

— Various sectors of the community are desiring a voice in the planning process.

Citizens can help city and county planners debate and decide the issues of growth, where that growth should be distributed around the area and how to allocate precious resources of land, money, time and people.

Teska was optimistic that Lincoln, because of its planning history, has a good chance of resolving those questions.

Tips Given

Teska offered a few tips on how to be an effective participant in that planning game:

- Know your legal rights.
- Give constructive comments, not just negative ones.
- Become involved while the plan is being formulated, not after it's cast in concrete.
- Get the facts.
- Respect others.
- Enjoy your efforts.

Survey: Public Wants Nixon Questioned Under Oath

By LOUIS HARRIS
If former President Richard Nixon is too ill to travel to Washington, D.C. to testify, a 71-23% majority of the American people believes that he should be required to answer questions under oath at San Clemente.

A 60-33% majority determined that President Ford was "wrong to issue a pardon" to the former President, and now the public strongly believes, by 57-34%, that the Watergate trial of Nixon's former aides should not be called off. By 69-20%, a majority feels that "justice would not be served by dropping the case." Three-quarters of the country feel that Nixon is guilty of abuse of power and obstruction of justice in the Watergate case and should have been brought to trial. Now that a trial for Nixon is impossible, the people are more determined than ever to see the trial of his former aides carried through.

Although 30% believes that Nixon is presently "seriously ill" with phlebitis, and 43% believes that he is "moderately ill," most Americans are also quite determined that his health not be used as an excuse to prevent him from testifying, the full truth about Watergate from coming out and our system of justice from being applied to the case and running its course.

Between Sept. 23 and 27, a cross section of 1,544 adults nationwide was asked:

"Special Prosecutor Leon Jaworski has subpoenaed former President Nixon to testify at the Watergate trial of his key aides. If it is determined that former President Nixon is too ill to testify in person in Washington, D.C. at the Watergate trial, then do you feel he should be asked questions under oath at San Clemente, the answers to which will be used as part of the Watergate trial, or do you think he should not be subjected to such questioning?"

its judgment about the justice of the pardon. The people were asked:

"As far as you are concerned, do you think the health of former President Nixon is now a major consideration in judging whether his pardon by President Ford was justified, is a minor consideration, or do you think the health issue was brought out to create a wave of sympathy for former President Nixon?"

HEALTH ISSUE AND THE PARDON

Major consideration 16%
Minor consideration 27%
Brought out to create sympathy 48%
Not sure 9%

That 48% of the public is suspicious about the use of Nixon's ill health to soften public opposition to the pardon reveals public feeling about the pardon itself. By 62-29%, a majority rejects the argument that "with former President Nixon in bad mental and physical health, it was right for President Ford to issue the pardon."

The Watergate episode and the subsequent pardon by President Ford of former President Nixon are still present in the minds of the American people.

Improvements Nixed
Fort Madison, Iowa (UPI) — Lee County voters have rejected proposals totaling $2.7 million for courthouse improvements.

The public has come to view the case as a test of the American system of justice, and even the current ill health of former President Nixon does not temper that deep conviction.

LINE Favored In Showdown

If you were to compile a football "tale of the tape" for Friday night's Lincoln East-Lincoln Northeast showdown, you might come up with something like:

Northeast — Physically stronger, more experienced, more consistent, superior defense.

East — Quicker, better passing, more explosive offensively.

Having considered that, you can now throw everything out the window. Why? Because anything goes when these two prep powerhouses collide.

That's why more than 10,000 fans are expected to pack Seacrest Field for the state's No. 1 game, which will count four ways: (1) city standings; (2) Trans-Nebraska Conference standings; (3) Eastern I-80 Conference standings; and (4) state-wide ratings.

The stakes being what they are, a tie similar to the one staged two years ago could leave both teams' followers disappointed.

East and Northeast battled to a 7-7 deadlock in 1972 before 10,250 fans. The Capital City clubs also tied for the state championship that year.

Last week's forecasting included correct choices for all four city games, hiking the season total to a perfect 22 for 22.

State-wide, the mark was 126-46 for .731, lowering the seasonal log slightly to 609-219-25 (736).

In games involving Lincoln teams, it's:

Lincoln Northeast (5-0) v. Lincoln East (5-0), Friday night, Seacrest Field — The Rockets rate a slight edge for two reasons: their defensive consistency and their ability to make fewer mistakes offensively.

Omaha Holy Name (4-1) v. Lincoln Plus X (4-1), Friday night, Plus X Stadium — The Thunderbolts don't get to play a Class B school very often. When it's a rated one, Plus X has no trouble delivering its best.

Lincoln High (3-2) at Millard (14), Friday night — The Links need to find a way to get into the end zone. Millard at home will be rugged competition.

Grand Island (3-2) v. Lincoln Southeast (5-0), Saturday night, Seacrest Field — The Knights are drawing more fan support than they've had in the last seven years. They're excited to watch and they win.

Elsewhere, it's: Omaha Benson over Omaha North, Columbus over Hastings, Omaha West over Creighton Prep, Ord over Central City, North Platte over Alliance, York over Crete, Scribner over Wisner-Pilger, Raymond Central over Platteview, Fairmont over Polk, Lyman over Gurley and Adams over Barneston.

Kings To Face Hawks

Omaha — The Kansas City-Omaha Kings will host the Atlanta Hawks here Thursday night at 7:35 in Civic Auditorium in a pre-season exhibition game.

This will be the only exhibition game the Kings will play in Omaha and the second of three games with the Hawks.

The most noticeable item in the Hawks lineup will probably be the absence of former LSU all-American Pete Maravich.

Maravich had several reported disputes last year with Atlanta coach Cotton Fitzsimmons, former Kansas State coach and was even suspended at one time.

Maravich was traded to the New Orleans Jazz, a new franchise in the NBA, between seasons.

However, there should be two familiar names playing for the Hawks in former Missouri standout John Brown and NBA standout Lou Hudson.

Kings coach Phil Johnson is again expected to use several players.

Johnson will probably start Nate Archibald and Jimmy Walker at guards, Sam Lacey at center and Nate Williams and Ron Behagen at forwards.

Former Colorado standout Scott Wedman, who has been impressive in the Kings' exhibition games, is among the players expected to see a lot of action.

If the Air Force were to meet Yale on a neutral field, Air Force's Handi-Rating of 18 would hold a 12-point advantage over Yale's 30 rating.

If the game were played at AIR FORCE, allow Air Force 3 points for playing at home. AIR FORCE would become a 15-point favorite.

If the game were played at YALE, allow Yale 3 points for playing at home. This would make Air Force a 9-point favorite.

Crime Unit Approves $5,982 For Jail Pretrial Release Plan

The Region II Crime Commission Wednesday approved a request for $5,982 in federal funds to continue operation of the existing pretrial release program in the City Jail.

T. Clement Gaughan, Lancaster public defender, told the commission that the program's operation has been "excellent."

The program, which originated in the Lincoln Bar Association, encountered opposition from Police Chief Joe Carroll when funding was first sought about a year ago.

After months of negotiation with Carroll the program was modified slightly to give police more voice in who would be released under the program and it received State Crime Commission approval.

Under the program law students interview those held in jail after their arrest for misdemeanor offenses. If the suspects meet certain standards, such as local residence and holding a job, the person may be released on his own recognizance.

According to police policy the only other way a person may be released from jail is to an attorney. Supporters of the program argue that this imposes an economic hardship that is unnecessary to insure a person's appearance in court.

Funding for the program was 90% federal, 10% local. In its second year the split will be 60% federal and 40% local. Under State Crime Commission guidelines the program may receive federal funds for only three years, after which time it must be supported entirely by local funds.

In other action at the Region II Crime Commission members discussed planning and administrative procedures and how they should operate now that the commission has a fulltime director, Kurt Snoberger, formerly in the police-community relations office, was named to that position last month.

Msgr. Paradis To Give Speech

Msgr. Wilfrid H. Paradis will talk about the national Catechetical Directory now being assembled.

The institute is expected to draw 400 teachers from Catholic schools in the Lincoln Diocese, Nebraska south of the Platte River.

Music news is covered thoroughly in the "Sunday Journal and Star."

Blacksmith Coal Selling In Bennet

Bennet — Blacksmiths from all over Nebraska are converging on Bennet to get a supply of the special coal they use for making horse shoes, sharpening plow lays and other blacksmithing jobs.

Ray Stevens, manager of the Bennet elevator, said, "We had to buy a whole carload of the stuff to get any at all. Our local blacksmith couldn't sharpen plow lays without it so we got the carload. Now we are selling it to anyone who wants it."

Stevens warned that buyers had to bring their own sacks. "We don't have any way to sack it so we are selling it in bulk. It used to come sacked but this isn't, so bring your truck and a shovel. You can have all you want while the load lasts," he said.

Stevens said the shortage of blacksmith coal had been very real in Nebraska. "We won't have any trouble selling the whole load once the word is around that we have it," he said.

School Land Being Appraised

The State Board of Educational Lands and Funds is obtaining appraisals on land improvements under 563 leases that will expire on Dec. 31, according to Executive Secretary Kent Hickman.

The appraisals are being made to enable the board to arrange long-term leases "as quickly as possible" after the current leases expire, Hickman said.

The board administers a trust of 1.55 million acres of state-owned school land.

The board has also directed the state surveyor to prepare a preliminary plat and proposals for lots on about 1,200 acres on the north side of Lake McConaughy, near Ogallala. Board staff members will contact Keith County zoning officials to ensure any school land sales would coincide with county plans for lake homestead development.

To assist in board planning, Hickman was directed to search for an submit names of land development consultants by Dec. 2, indicating their ideas on the McConaughy project and fees they require.

Hickman said much of the land at McConaughy "does not have waterfront potential." Any "definitive action" to consider selling or leasing homesteads is some time away, he said. "The board just wants to get the wheels moving" and investigate possibilities.

The board also directed that appraisals be made of two lots of land in Omaha and one in North Platte which are escheat properties placed in state trust after the property owners died without heirs or relatives. The lots will be sold at auction.

Lancaster Manor Board Tabs Kuhns, Mrs. Wood

Dean Kuhns Wednesday was elected first vice-chairperson of the Lancaster Manor Advisory Board, which is chaired by Mrs. Pat Taylor.

Also elected was Mrs. Marie Wood to fill the second vice-chairperson position. The three officers comprise the executive board of the advisory group.

Bob Esquivel and Florence Scheer of the activities department outlined the activity program underway for the residents.

Administrator Jerry Gibson pointed out to the board that because of increased revenue being allowed Lancaster Manor for welfare recipients under state guidelines, the loss per day per resident is running about $2 less than it had been.

He said that the average per diem cost is $20.73 and the county is being reimbursed for $12.26 of that, leaving a loss of $8.47 as compared to about $10.50 previously.

Inflation Hurts DeCamp Firm

... Foreclosure Expected

York (AP) — State Sen. John DeCamp of Neligh says "tight money and inflation" have forced a halt to work on a financially troubled apartment and condominium project in York in which he is involved.

And, the York News-Times has reported that a foreclosure action is expected to be filed soon against the project's construction firm, whose incorporators include DeCamp.

The newspaper said it was told by an authoritative source that the action would be filed by First Federal Savings and Loan Association of Lincoln, holder of two mortgages totaling $538,500 on a 4.89-acre tract of land in York where the Forest Heights Apartments and Condominiums are under construction by D and D Construction Co., Inc.

A D and D project in O'Neill, which includes a six-plex and a condominium, carries mortgages of $167,400 plus mechanic's, materialmen's and subcontractors liens of $48,688, for a total of $216,088. An equitable action for foreclosure was filed Aug. 12 in Holt County District Court at O'Neill by the Wiggam Co. against D and D, First Federal Savings and Loan Association of Lincoln and all others who have liens. There has been no judicial action on this suit.

A notice of entry has been filed at the York County Courthouse in connection with the York project. This is usually considered a preliminary action to foreclosure proceedings.

A foreclosure will add to the woes of the already financially beleaguered D and D Co., which has mechanic's, subcontractors and materialmen's liens totaling $116,057 filed against it at the York County Courthouse. An additional bill of $1,041 is held by the City of York Water Department for main extensions and valve and meter charges, with another $137 owed the City of York for mowing the weeds at the site of the apartment-condominium project.

The First Federal claim, plus the various liens against the project, total $654,557.

Foreclosure would mean the property would be sold with the mortgages and liens being satisfied from receipts of the sale in order of their priority.

In papers on file at the York County Courthouse, D and D Construction Co., Inc., lists Sen. DeCamp and his wife, Linda, as incorporators, along with Robert M. French of Omaha. However, French no longer is with the corporation and is believed to be living in California.

The York papers list Linda DeCamp as the registered agent of the corporation, but a D and D letterhead names a Patrick Varner of Fremont as executive vice president. When contacted, Varner said he had not worked with or for D and D since the first part of the year.

DeCamp told the York News-Times that at least one attempt has been made to take over the property to complete the project. He said Lincoln lumberman John L. Hoppe, who also holds the biggest lien against D and D, $62,406, had negotiated for some time but the try failed last month when legal difficulties snagged the proposed transfer of the property.

DeCamp said the effort broke down when "a local realtor asserted a claim" for a realtor's fee on the transfer. That came about because DeCamp earlier had authorized D. Weber Realty Co. of York to sell the property and under the Hoppe proposal no purchase price was to be set.

DeCamp termed the fee claimed by Weber as "ridiculous."

DeCamp said his project was designed and cost-estimated many months before construction began and that rampant inflation boosted the price of some items as much as 300%. He said he was unable to get many materials on time and then when they were received the price was "unbelievable."

DeCamp said one apartment building is "98%" complete and the other could be finished in about "three weeks." He did not say how complete the condominiums are, nor when they could be finished.

Hruska Sponsors Legislation To Consolidate Criminal Code

Omaha (AP) — Sen. Roman Hruska, R-Neb., said Wednesday a bill, pending in the Senate Judiciary Committee, to reform the federal criminal code would "serve the ends of justice in their broadest sense — justice to the individual and justice to society as a whole."

Hruska, a sponsor of the legislation, said federal criminal law now is "a haphazard, hodgepodge of conflicting, contradictory and imprecise laws piled one upon the other with little relevance to each other or to the state of criminal law as a whole."

Speaking in Omaha at a meeting of the Nebraska Association of County Attorneys, Hruska said: "We need a new federal criminal code because the United States is probably the only major nation that has never enacted a true code."

The federal panel law, he said, "reflects neglect. Because of its lack of clarity, consistency and comprehensiveness, it tends to undermine the very system of justice of which it is the foundation."

Hruska said the purpose of his bill is to replace "this myriad of laws" with a logical, integrated code. He said the measure would codify for the first time the insanity defense, simplify all aspects of the law, eliminate technicalities and loopholes, and adopt a consistent and integrated system of sentencing.

The senator said there are 79 statutes dealing with theft and the proposed code consolidates them into one statute.

Hruska said the bill also would "eliminate never-used statutes that clutter up the law." Among them, he mentioned "those making it a federal offense to operate a pirate ship on behalf of a foreign prince, detain a U.S. carrier pigeon or seduce a female steamship passenger."

Arson Is Suspected In Humboldt

Lincoln Star Special

Humboldt — A rash of fires here in the past two months has caused officials to suspect arson.

Fire Chief Richard D. Arington believes "the last five fires were definitely" due to arson.

Site of the first five of the blazes was an old hotel building not in use, Arington said.

Last Friday night a building a block away from the hotel was destroyed by flames.

The Nebraska Rebekah Lodge maintained a state office in the downstairs portion of the building. The fire chief said many of the old records of the lodge were lost in the blaze, but new records are expected to be salvaged.

A man residing in an apartment located in this building was able to escape unhurt from the burning structure, Arington related.

Although damage figures are still unavailable, the fire chief said the Knights of Pythias reported $12,000 fire and smoke damage to their quarters in the building next door to Friday night's fire victim, American

Woman Killed, Son Hurt, Apparently In Gun Battle

Omaha (AP) — An apparent mother-son argument in a suburban home just outside the extreme northwestern Omaha city limits resulted in the shooting death of a woman and the critical wounding of her son.

Douglas County officials said the mother, Darlene Randall, and, her only son, Steve, 13, apparently became embroiled in an argument Wednesday morning, and that shots were fired.

The incident was reported about 8:45 a.m., as the son called the 911 police emergency number for aid.

The youth gave officers his address, then collapsed. When deputies arrived on the scene, they found both the son and the mother on the basement floor, the telephone receiver still off the hook, and locked on the 911 number.

The mother was pronounced dead at the scene of multiple gunshot wounds to the chest and abdomen. Investigators said she was shot with a .22-caliber, semi-automatic rifle.

The son was rushed to a local hospital, where he underwent surgery for .38-caliber bullet wounds to the chest and abdomen. Following the surgery, he was listed in critical condition.

Robert Randall, the husband and father, was in Missouri when the incident occurred. He was notified of the shootings, and returned to Omaha early Wednesday afternoon.

'Wanted' Man Robs Council Bluffs Bank

Council Bluffs, Iowa (UPI) — A well dressed man who said he was armed and wanted for murder took an undetermined amount of money from the Council Bluffs Savings Bank Patio branch office Wednesday.

FBI agent Vic Harvey said about $4,040 was taken, and authorities were searching for the robber and an accomplice who was waiting for him in a getaway car.

Bank employees said the suspect "cased" the bank prior to the afternoon robbery. He then approached the night manager, David Brockman, and handed him what one employee called a "long note" detailing what he wanted. Included in the instructions was a demand for $4,000.

When Brockman had partially read the note, he looked up at the man and said, "You're kidding." The robber then replied, employees said, "I'm already wanted for murder so I have nothing to lose."

Brockman, who was standing behind a teller cage void of cash when handed the note, went to the first cage, and emptied the cash drawer and did the same to the next two. He placed the money in an attache case the robber was carrying.

In the note, the robber said he was carrying a weapon, but employees said he didn't brandish it during the caper.

A patron at the drive-in portion of the bank adjacent to the regular facility gave temporary chase to the robber as he fled into the awaiting getaway car.

The suspect was described as 5-9, 25 to 30 years old and weighing 160 to 170 pounds. He had blonde curly hair, and was wearing a navy blue sports coat, light slacks and a wide tie.

One of the tellers noticed a scar on his face. He wore no mask.

Witnesses said the getaway car had out-of-state license plates.

The bank was held up in late August with about $2,500 taken. The suspect was arrested later in Indiana.

THEY CALLED ME AT NINE, JIM. I HAD AN HOUR TO GET TO CLUGS!

THEN WHEN I SAW THEY WERE JUST OUT TO BUG ME...

I DECIDED THE ONLY WAY I COULD GET THEM BACK INTO THE WORK WAS TO GIVE 'EM A TEST!

IT WASN'T THE SMARTEST MOVE, BUT IT WAS THE ONLY OPTION I HAD!

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE - Here's how to work it:
A X Y D L B A A X R
is LONGFELLOW

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

Here is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.
